THE TERRA CEIA FARMS

February 2015

Dear Customer,

Greetings from Terra Ceia. I hope this letter finds you in good health and ready to get in the garden!

As I type this, we are getting ready to 'destroy' some historical temperature records over the next few days, reaching a low of 5 degrees in Eastern NC. Although it is the end of February, I can't remember the last time we were in single digits. I may have to borrow some more appropriate clothing from my midwestern relatives.

It has been a wet and cold winter here. Since we start shipping Spring product in March and the last time we were able to work in the field was early January, I am starting to get very antsy. At this point it looks like it will be a mad rush to get everything lifted and prepared by the time you receive this catalog.

The family is doing well and in just a few months, I will be watching our oldest graduate from high school and our youngest graduate from Kindergarten. While I definitely think I'm ready for the transition, I am not sure how their mom is going to take it! Hopefully better than the 24th anniversary of her 21st birthday..

Mom is good too. Over the last few months, I have typically arrived at work to find her under the the pecan trees my grandfather planted 70+ years ago harvesting the remains of an excellent crop. Believe me, this is not a fun job and I think she has picked up over 40 bushels all by herself so far! She has also been blessed with lots of visits from her family over the last few months and has the good fortune of visiting with other relatives in Florida right now - just in time to miss this awful weather.

Thanks again for your business and support this past spring. We are thankful for our faithful customers and look forward to serving you this upcoming shipping season. Let us know how we can help.

God bless you all.

Sincerely,

Carl Van Staalduijn

<h2>Tulip</h2>
Zone: 4 Sugg. planting rate: 5 ft <sup>2</sup> Light: Sun	Size: 12+ cm bulb Blooms: Mid Spring	Tulips are unparalleled for their vibrant colors, so it only takes a few to make a bold statement in the landscape. They do not, however, perennialize well in warm southern climates. If you happen to live in such an area, lifting your bulbs annually or treating them as annuals is the only way to overcome this. Most gardeners feel it is worth it, as we have been shipping them for over 50 years now!

About graded blooming size bulbs...

Bulbs in these bushels are comprised of all sizes that will bloom reliably (aka 'field run grade'). Because the size of the flower is directly related to bulb size, we suggest that you purchase our largest blooming size bulbs for formal plantings. However, if you want bulbs for naturalizing, perennializing, or large-scale informal plantings, the items listed below are your best value.

Note: To ensure Christmas blooming, we suggest using bottom heat. Because Amaryllis thrive at an air temperature of 68 to 70 degrees with a soil temperature of 75 degrees, bottom heat is essential to getting your bulbs off to an early start. To provide these conditions without the expense of a high-tech glasshouse, simply place your pots on a standard heating pad. Heating pads enable you to leave the thermostat at a comfortable temperature while providing sufficient heat in the root zone. It should be noted that Amaryllis will grow fine in the absence of bottom heat, only not as fast.

Where Did The Name Terra Ceia Come From And What Does It Mean?

Although most people credit the Dutch for the name, it is neither from the Dutch language, nor was it given to the area by the many Dutch immigrants who made their way here during the early 1900s. Terra Ceia finds its roots in two languages: "Terra" is Latin for earth or soil. "Ceia" is Italian (Sicilian dialect I have been told) for expanse, sky or heavens. It is typically used with religious connotations. Therefore, the most common translations are "Heavenly Earth" or "Where the Heavens Meet the Earth".

It is interesting to note that most of the land in this area was swampland prior to the turn of the century. It was typically purchased as such by wealthy investors who would, in turn, drain the swamp, then sell the timber, and finally, liquidate the land. Many of these investors were Italians from the Northeastern U.S., so it is likely that when they found themselves at the end of their investment cycle, they needed to use some catchy marketing to get rid of the cut-over swampland. Thus "Terra Ceia" was born!

What Makes It An Ideal Area For Raising Bulb Blooming Plants?

Ironically, the bottom of a swamp usually is "heavenly earth" (think of all that decaying organic matter year after year); the problem is making it accessible for use. One of my father's first jobs upon arrival in 1943 was "dynamiting" cypress stumps! That work is all done now and one is hard pressed to imagine that less than one hundred years ago, this area was for the most part, a mosquito-infested swamp! It should also be noted that most Dutchmen did not necessarily come here for the soil, even though it was well advertised! At the time, Europeans had just endured a time of horrible economic conditions followed by two world wars. It was a good time to leave for a land of "better opportunity".

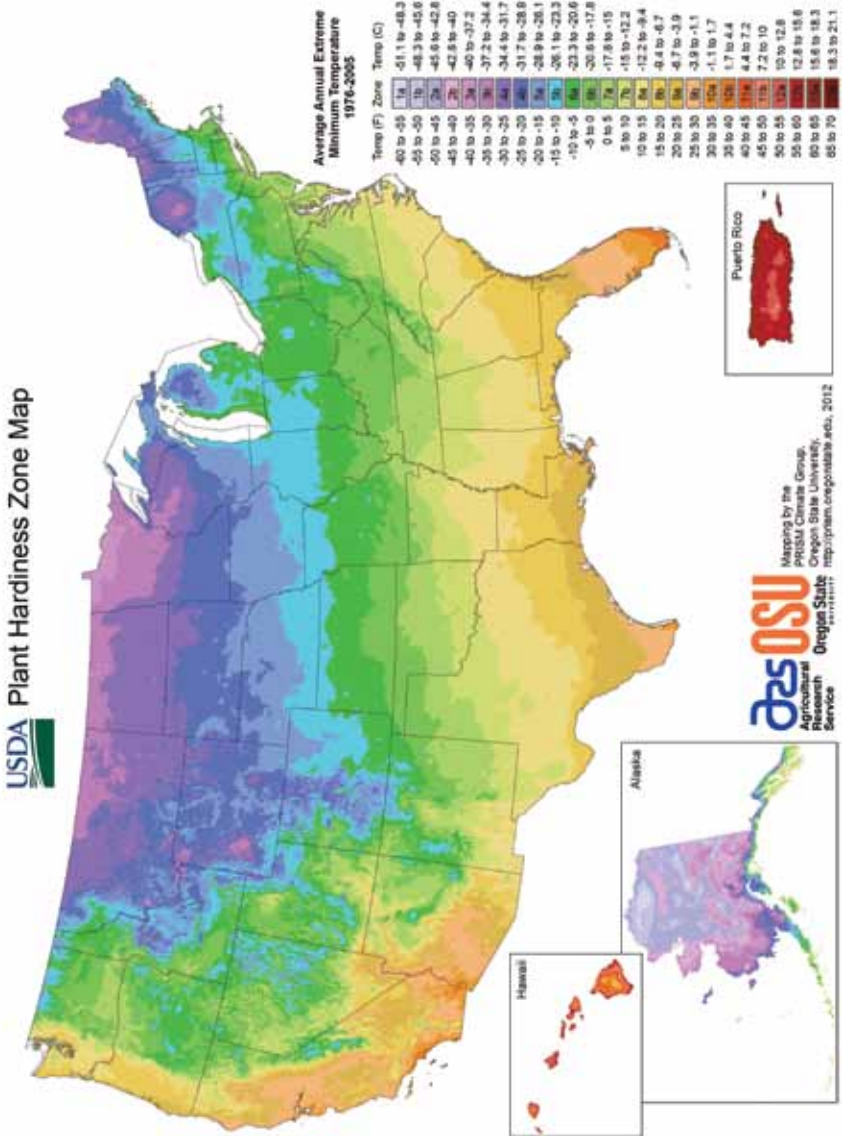

As far as bulb growing is concerned, you will find that most immigrant communities trace their roots back to the same geographic areas they emigrated from, and that new immigrants continued on with the same skills and careers they had in their native countries when possible. Terra Ceia's immigrants largely came from either the "bulb district" or from other agricultural areas of Holland where, respectively, floriculture and dairying were the predominant industries. Basically, they "did what they knew" and prayed that things would work out. The flower growers in particular, found that the unique climate and ready access to the big markets in the Northeast gave them opportunities to continue their trade here and many became quite successful. At its zenith, as many as 30 families made their living growing cut flowers for the Burroughs of New York and other big cities. Ultimately, this success led to "better" opportunities for later generations and many pursued new careers. Add to this a changing marketplace (ie. International air freight), and today you will only find two families that still endeavor to make the flowers that Terra Ceia is famous for their existence.

The Terra Ceia Farms Guarantee

- We guarantee our plants to be completely healthy and properly sized when they arrive at your location.
- We also guarantee them to be true-to-name when they bloom.
- Should one of the above conditions not be met, our liability is limited to replacement (subject to availability), a credit to be used against other purchases, or a prompt refund of the purchase price - whichever option the customer prefers.

Using the Zone Map

We want you to get the best results from bulbs you select from The Terra Ceia Farms. That is why we have provided this Hardiness Zone Map. The Hardiness Zones are based on the average minimum temperatures for each area. Many factors, such as sun, wind, snow cover or rainfall in your climate can also effect the minimum temperature in your area as presented by this map. Once you determine the zone you live in, you can use the chart, along with the zone listings in our product descriptions, to determine which varieties are best for your garden. If you have a question, please call us, or consult your local County Agricultural Agent.
